MRS. GARNER PASSES AWAY

Culminating several weeks of serious illness, during which time her passing was expected, Mrs. Fanny A. Garner Alex Leishman of Hillspring mother of Harold and Arthur Mrs. Lois Bennett of Magrath and Mrs. Wm. Anderson, pass- and Mrs. Wm. Anderson, Rayed away at the home of her mond. Five children have pre-daughter Tuesday from heart ceased their mother in death.

She had been very ill for two months, and the family from Magrath and the Cardston district had been here almost steadily because of her serious condition. She suffered a partial stroke about a month ago, but revived somewhat after that. Her condition grew slowly worse and the end was looked for.

She was the mother of a large family, seven children and her husband surviving her passing. About four years ago she and her husband moved to Raymond and have made their home with Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Anderson since that time. Pioneers of Cardston and the United Irrigation district, Mr. and Mrs. Garner have played their full part in every locality where they have made their home.

Funeral services will be held Saturday afternoon in the 2nd Ward Church, Bishop Walker formation, also names of places to stop and where to dine and in charge.

Mrs. Ada B. Ford has spent the past week visiting here with friends and relatives.

"LENA RIVERS" BIG HIT

The three act drama "Lena Rivers" coached by Miss Iris Jones and presented Tuesday night in the Second Ward Hall under the auspices of the 2nd Ward Mutual went over big and proved two hours of delight to the large crowd who gathered to see it.

Carrying an interesting story from the first curtain to the last, the players put the story over in fine style and received generous applause from the audience throughout the entire evening. With sufficient comedy in the plot to make the crowd feel gay, and enough pathos to satisfy all, the presentation was exceptionally well done and the make up and costuming certainly commendable.

We have no desire to pose as a dramatic critic, and we would dislike any of those connected with the performance to feel slighted, but we thought that the work of Miss Martha Tomas as Mrs. Livingston, was outstanding in her portrayal of a very difficult role. Having a heavy heart with a "tough me not" attitude all through, Miss Thomas repressed her laughter in points in the performance were to most it would have been impossible, & maintained her dignified pose throughout. She was admirably assisted in maintaining the dignity of the house of Livingstone by Miss Ina Jones as her daughter, Bernyse Jones as another daughter and Jim Weaver as John Livingstone Jr., a harum scarum, always spoiling the plans of his mother, and Reva Garner as "Lena Rivers" the heroine of the play carried their parts very well.

Supporting them and doing their parts in splendid fashion were Hyrum Fromm, Leonard Watson, Shirley King, and Fay Walker and Mrs. Irene Bowden Mrs. Donna Frank, and Miss Katherine Bennett.

One or two of the performers seemed to forget that people were there to see and HEAR and several of their speeches were entirely lost to the audience. Out side of this, we thought an amateur performance featuring many who we have previously not seen in a show that "Lena Rivers" was almost 100 p.c., and we think it should be repeated and feel sure that another capacity house would be out to see it.

The Edmonton Branch of the L. D. S. Church was reorganized last Sunday and Hon. N. E. Tanner, Minister of Lands and Mines and a former bishop in Cardston was made president. Congratulations to Mr. Tanner He is a relative of E. P. and Byron Tanner.

FIRST WARD SUPPER WELL-PATRONIZED

The First Ward Supper Wednesday night was as usual very well patronized some four hundred and fifty people being served. There was no bazaar or candy sale in connection with the Supper, and after the meal people visited and chatted until the dance got under way, which was attended by a nice sized crowd.

The ladies of the Ward who had the supper in charge are to be complimented for the fine meal served, and the girls in charge of the tables done a fine job of serving. Ira McBride, A. J. Walton, Cyril Layne, Wes McMullin and Ern Nilsson seemed to be the official bitter downers and kept the tables filled as long as there were people in the hall to be served.

These suppers always receive good patronage and seem to be a fine way of raising funds. While there is considerable work attached to them yet for most people it is easier to work and assist in something of this sort than it is to dig up the cash for a donation, and then too, there is the social aspect of such a gathering which is worth a great deal to all of us.

RAYMOND HAS QUALIFIED

Raymond has been accepted under the Dominion Government scheme for Home Building loans, and citizens whose proposition qualifies may now receive assistance. Included in the plan is payment in full of the first year's taxes, 50 p.c. of the second year's and 25 p.c. of the third year. Specifications are contained in literature of the Dominion Government and interested parties should investigate this scheme.

Raymondites are wondering whether to plan for Calgary or Medicine Hat to see their Majesties on their coming trip. Naturally, we all want to see them.

BASKETBALL PLAYOFFS UNDER WAY

Because of the refusal of some of the senior Basketball teams to participate, the Basketball playoffs scheduled here or the end of the month have been knocked into a cocked hat and district playoffs are under way. In the draw that was made, Raymond and Magrath play home and home games total points to count, and Lethbridge Aces and Medicine Hat meet in similar series, then the winner of these will meet in a best two out of three series. The home and home games were played Thursday night in Magrath and Medicine Hat and Saturday in Leth. and Raymond. The three game series will be March 27, 29 and April 1st. Then the winners of the south will meet the winners of the northern part of the province.

NEWS NOTES

Will Stone spied a robin Tuesday morning, the first one reported locally this spring. Ducks have been seen going north, and all in all it commences to look like an early spring. More moisture, now that the frost is out of the ground would be very welcome.

Elder Kenneth Wilde, recently returned from the Tahitian Mission was the speaker at Rotary on Monday giving the Rotarians an interesting talk on that group of islands, and showing an interesting collection of souvenirs of his sojourn there.

Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Walton returned on Saturday from spending the winter in the States. They are both looking well and report a very enjoyable time.

Sunday was a nearly perfect day with the sun shining brightly, no wind and their beautiful and warm. It feels as if spring was here at last.

Boxing Card Tonight

During the past week entries have been received in large numbers for the inter-scholastic Boxing Card to be staged here tonight, and Golden Snow says there are plenty of entries in now to make a full evening, and they are still being received.

Covering the territory from the border to Calgary and the width of the Province, entries have been received from all parts of the district, with the towns and schools from High River south predominating. A first-class ring has been put in the Opea House, seats arranged and everything in readiness. Barring what changes may have to be made in officials, here is the list handed to us by M. Rayo Woolf, who is Chairman of Boxing for the local Athletic Association and who has this card in charge:

IDLERS BOW TO JACKS

Playing the last scheduled league game of the season last Friday night in the Opera House, the Jacks defeated their home town rivals, the Idlers by a score of 58-30. There was a fair-sized crowd present to watch the game and they all greatly enjoyed it despite the rather one-sided score.

The teams are now keeping in training awaiting the coming playoffs which started last night.

Mrs. T. Geo. Wood left Monday for a visit with relatives in Salt Lake City. Pres. Wood took her as far as Coult's where she took the train.

Farmers were reported on the land between Taber and Lethbridge Wednesday. Harrows were working wonderfully the reporter stated.

The week-end witnessed a series of dances and parties for the people of the town. Friday evening there was a Junior Dance in the afternoon preceding the Relief Society parties and the boys and girls had a wonderful time. Then Saturday night the Junior Girls and Explorers boys of both Raymond and Lethbridge joined in an overall and Hall, and with their leaders enjoyed a real evening. More about the Relief Society parties elsewhere.

Playing in Magrath last night in the first game of the District playoffs, the Raymond Union Jacks defeated the Magrath Lions 24-31 in the Magrath High School and will carry this 7 point margin into the game here Saturday night. The game was watched by a house full of rabid fans; a good delegation going from here. Close checking featured the game throughout and many of the points were scored on long shots. Doug Shippo botham and Rulon Leavitt had the whistles for the game. Nearly every player had three fouls on them when the game ended but only Donny Nilsson left the floor for fouling.

It looks like a playoff between the Aces and Raymond as the former beat the Medicine Hat Terriers 28-42 last night in the gas city. All four teams meet again tomorrow night in Lethbridge and Raymond.

MAGRATH HI COPS PROVINCIAL TITLE

The Magrath Hi School Basketballers took their third straight Provincial title this week when they defeated the Lethbridge Collegiate boys two straight by scores of 49-33 on Monday night and 56-32 on Wednesday night, the games played in Magrath and Lethbridge respectively.

The Garden City boys played splendid basketball in both games, handing the Lethridge team a worse trimming on their own court than they did in the Magrath floor. Congratulations to Glenn Miller and his champions, and also to the other Hi School coaches in Southern Alberta who made the Magrath Hi play such high-class ball to hold the provincial honors.

NEWS NOTES

Speakers at the Raymond 2nd Ward Sunday evening were Elders M. T. King of the Stake Presidency, Wm. Jensen and Harris Walker. A large congregation was present and greatly enjoyed the meeting.

Fathers and Sons night in Rotary will be Monday next, March 27th at the Second Ward Church Ray. If you haven't a son of your own borrow one for that night and be on hand at 7:30. Moving pictures and refreshments will occupy the time of the evening.

Jones: "How do you spend your income?"

Smith: "About 30 per cent for shelter, 30 per cent for food, 40 per cent for amusement."

Jones: "But that adds up to 120 per cent!"

Smith: "Don't I know it!"

The total number of beef cattle from Canadian feeders to be exported to the United States is set at 51,720 head each quarter and for all other countries 8,280 head. This information was contained in a proclamation signed by President Roosevelt Tuesday. This gives Canada 86.2 per cent of the total imports of cattle the United States allows. Canada's number in any calendar year is 142,230, other countries 22,730. Canadian cattlemen should appreciate this consideration, while it may be no more than we are entitled to, it is considerably more than we might well have expected with the other cattle countries that are knocking at Uncle Sam's door for admittance.

CHAPTER THIRTEEN

"Knowledge is power."
—Bacon.

In 1919, Prince Albert and his brother Prince Henry, the Duke of Gloucester, decided that they would recommence their studies which had been interrupted abruptly by the World War. Consequently, they leased a house in Cambridge in order to attend the course at the famous Trinity College. This decision was reached after a careful consideration of all fact, and history records that the problems in this regard were not unlike in the Royal Palace as in the humble English home, where young men had returned from active service in the War without knowing where to turn next in their efforts to recommence a normal existence. It was not easy for these thousands of young men who had left their studies in boyhood to live through history instead of merely learning about it through reading books or listening to lectures. They had come face to face with the realities of life and they had reached manhood in that time. Hence, it was difficult to return to the studies of boyhood. However, these problems were solved in the Royal Family in the same manner as in any other English home.

Prince Albert and his brother did not follow any courses merely with the object of gaining a degree, nor for the purpose of gathering a classical education but they studied those courses which would be most useful when they were called upon to serve their people as the sons of the King, particularly history, economics and civics. The present King was an enthusiastic student and he attended to his work in such a manner that laid the solid foundation for his keen knowledge of everything which theoretically and practically pertains to the duties of a leader of the masses. It accounts for his searching questions on any tours of inspection; it is the real reason for his thorough appreciation and understanding of minute details of all problems concerning the welfare and future of the men and women who live anywhere in his realm; it is the basic explanation for his interest and sound judgment on all social and economic angles of mankind from the wealthiest capitalist to the lowly worker on the farm, in the factory, workshop, or mine. Throughout the years, he has continued to add to his very extensive library and to his personal knowledge, keeping well informed on everything which relates to the welfare of his people in all sections of the Empire. There has never been a King on the throne who was better informed on the changes and developments, nor more in tune with the times and the changing outlook than the present monarch.

Prince Albert and his brother lived with Sir Louis Greig in the university town of Cambridge while he was attending lectures at Trinity College. Sir Louis Greig had been associated with the present King for many years. He was a medical officer at Osborne when Prince Albert was student in that Naval School. He was on the Cumberland laid when young Prince Albert was taking the cruise. He attended the King's second son when he was sick aboard the Malaya. In other words, the paths of Prince Albert and the genial Sir Louis Greig crossed often and it founded a great friendship between them.

Although Prince Albert's progress at Cambridge was mainly confined to his studies, yet time and again he appeared at public functions instead of the late King George the Fifth, and his brother, the present Duke of Windsor, who was quite often away on trips, particularly on tours of Canada and Australia. This was the real beginning of his public life.

WORK—THE BUILDER OF MAN

Early in human history the Lord said to Adam "In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat thy bread all the days of thy life." In tracing history through the ages, ancient, medieval and modern, one discovers that nations and men who have been happy, prosperous and contented have been nations and peoples who have obeyed that first great commandment. All thru the same pages of history we find individuals and groups who have endeavored to circumvent this edict and to live with out work; and invariably these men or nations have ended in disappointment, sorrow and disgrace.

Today, we see people trying, and many of them succeeding in worming a living out of governments, either municipal or provincial, without work. Recently a man stole, committing a criminal offence because he felt his family and himself were not receiving sufficient relief. Had he exhausted all his efforts in getting work of some sort, or was he like many hundreds of others, afraid to go to work because he might lose his relief? Taking a lesson from the past, unless we inaugurate a system that spells work for everyone, even those on relief, we are facing death and dissolution as a nation. Yes, you may laugh if you please, but when God gave the edict to Adam he gave him the greatest blessing humanity ever received and a blessing that will always form the foundation of success.

We are approaching another planting time. We have a Welfare program in our midst, set up with the view of helping those willing to help themselves. How well will it succeed? Every fall enough garden stuff is wasted in our community to fill the cellars for every family in the town with bottled or canned vegetables for winter. Why isn't it there? Some people are too lazy to take care of this stuff even when it is given them. Others say you can buy it cheaper than you can put it down. Maybe so, but in nine cases out of every ten these same people neither put it down nor do they have the money to buy with when they need and as a consequence the children of such parents suffer from malnutrition because of the laziness and indolence of their parents.

If humanity would spend as much time working, as they spend trying to get out of work this world would be a veritable garden of Eden and practically all of our economic problems would be solved. We can live like leeches from the labor of others for awhile, and when we do we become like leeches with out backbone, brains or anything else that makes men. We may beat a lot of laws, but we will never beat the law of work and have any joy of conquest and satisfaction of accomplishment while we do it.

EASTER IDEAS

The Easter celebration has grown out on two different though related ideas. One is that of rejoicing at the coming of spring. From earliest history, people have felt happy when dreary Old Man Winter took his flight. The ancient peoples kicked up their heels in joyful merriment at their spring festivals. There was an old tradition that on these days the sun danced in the heavens. Probably the people did so much dancing and feasting, that everything around looked unsteady.

The heart of the modern Easter is the celebration of the resurrection of Jesus. That event is so far back in history that it is difficult for the modern world to visualize it. Did the risen Jesus appear in flesh and blood, did he appear in a spiritual presence, or did his followers see glorious visions which convinced them he had passed unharmed through the tragic portals of death?

One thing seems absolutely clear, that something happened at that date which changed all human history. Where the disciples of Jesus had been but a feeble little band, unknown outside a few tiny villages, they became historic figures. Somehow they got an inspiration that led them to go out and conquer have gone, the world has been the world. And wherever they come better.

The world is still very far from attaining the ideals preached by the Man of Nazareth. We can not tell what the Christian faith might do, for it has never really been tried on any large scale. We see many true Christians, but human society still remains largely pagan. Easter gives us a glimpse of a world that might be better, if it would take Christian ideas seriously.

The old Stake House over the week-end reminded one of what the mind's eye might picture an amphitheatre of medieval days. There was part of the stage still standing and the gallery seat frames still in place. The entire center part of the hall was gone, even the furnaces having been taken out and stored. Work of completing the dismantling commenced again on Monday.

Elder Barker Selman, who left here for missionary labors in Samoa, had his call changed to the Tongan or Friendly Islands when he reached Salt Lake City. In a letter to his parents from Auckland, N.Z., he expected to leave for the islands the end of February, and is likely in his field of labor now. Elder Lydell Roberts returned last summer from this mission.

C. F. Steele of the Lethbridge Herald staff, was one of a party of Alberta newspapermen who travelled from Lethbridge to Vancouver via the Trans Canada airliner on its flight Wednesday. It was Frank's first experience in air travel, but from his report he greatly enjoyed the experience and landed at Lethbridge a thorough convert to air travel.

WEEKLY LETTER

Although the calendar year begins in the middle of winter the farmers' year really begins in the springtime, and with the coming of spring we look forward to many new arrivals. To the layman, the sight of lambs gamboling in the sunshine is the source of much amusement but for the sheepman, it is a time for much serious planning and hard work.

About 21 weeks after the breeding season, the lambing season begins and it is then that the skilful attention of the shepherd is absolutely essential. Assistance in lambing is not often necessary but a man should be on hand both day and night to see that the lambs are properly mothered. In sheep, the normal presentation is for the fore-feet to come first with the nose lying between the fore legs, but if one fore-leg is doubled back or if the hind legs appear first, safe delivery is usually possible if prompt action is taken. It is not advisable to attempt to turn a lamb which coming hind feet first. In cases of serious malpresentation, it is necessary to push the lamb back into the uterus to get room to turn the limbs as there is not room in the passages. The task is made easier by elevating the ewe's hind parts above her head. If the ewe is exhausted after lambing, it is advisable to place the lamb in front of her and to encourage her to lick it, but she should not be made to rise to her feet until rested.

As a rule a ewe is better without heavy grain feeding for the first three or four days after lambing and appetizing feeds such as bran and the leafy parts of clover or alfalfa hay are useful at this time. A big "fill" of cold water is apt to cause trouble. The best way is to take off the chill and give a small amount at a time every hour or so until the ewe is satisfied.

While the ewe is still in the lambing pen, it is a good time to trim the wool away from around the udder. Another good practice is to mark twin lambs and their mother with the same brand so that they can be quickly identified amongst a crowd of ewes and lambs.

It should be the aim of the shepherd to have every ewe nurse at least one lamb and this necessitates fostering orphan and twin lambs on ewes which have lost their own lambs. The dead lamb should be skinned and the skin fastened on the orphan so that the smell will be recognized and the ewe will think that it is her own lamb. The rubbing of some of the ewes' milk on her nose and on the head and tail of the lamb will also help.

Young lambs make fast gains so that it is often economical to feed them in a "creep." Oats are perhaps most palatable and by the time the lambs are six weeks old, they will eat whole grain. All ram lambs not intended for breeding should be castrated when they are from ten days to two weeks old and docking of all lambs should be performed at the same time. Some sheep men recommend performing the two operations at different times but at the Experimental Station we have found that both operations can be done at one time with favorable results.

The Town took delivery Saturday of a caterpillar powered maintainer for the Town streets. The machine may be operated by one man which will cut down expense and the Council hope to keep the streets in A1 shape with it. It was brought from Calgary on a truck.

NOT FOR CHILDREN ONLY

(An editorial from the Rotarian Magazine)

Every parent wants his children, everybody's children, to have a playground. But he needs one, too. All adults do. A hard-bitten superintendent of steel mills in Gary, Indiana once went to the late Judge Elbert H. Gary and persuaded him, as chairman of the United States Steel Corporation, to appropriate $250,000 toward the purchase of land along Lake Michigan, adjacent to Gary, to be given to the public as the Indiana Dunes State Park.

"I didn't know," a friend said to the superintendent, "that you had that much sentiment in you."

"It wasn't sentiment," he replied. "I merely pointed out to the Judge that in another generation or so, unless we acted now, all that land would be occupied by industries or homes greatly increased in value, and out of reach. Our thousands of workers would then have no place to sit on the ground near the lake and eat picnic lunches undisturbed under real trees. All the signs would say 'Private Property; No Trespassing.' And that would tend to breed inefficient, discontented, dangerous-minded workers, ready for anything. That's why I wanted the park. There wasn't a spark of sentiment about it."

Maybe not. But the end served, all the same, was on the side of imperishable human values.

The ancient Greeks had a myth about a mighty wrestler. His name was Antaeus. He was a good deal of a nuisance, because he made every stranger wrestle with him; and if the stranger lost, he was put to death. Antaeus could be thrown but he always got up stronger than ever, thanks to contact with Mother Earth. The great Hercules came along one day, and by holding Antaeus completely off the ground, he succeeded in strangling him, and so ended his career.

There is immense significance in this ancient tale. All of us are stronger after direct contact with ancient Mother Earth. We cannot long be kept away from it and still remain wholly normal and healthy. But an increasingly urbanized civilization makes even an occasional return to the good earth ever more difficult for many of us. That very difficulty, however, emphasizes the need. Happily many communities—led by alert groups of citizens—have long understood that need and have long been doing more than a little to meet it. For instance, they have built kiddie parks, wading pools, and woodland camps for the youngsters—and parks and flower gardens and tennis courts for the grown ups.

In this as in most other cases it is no doubt only right to "think of the children first." Very well, let's do so. Let's give

$2 WORDS

The laughter with which Education greeted one of their own reports conspicuous for its "$2 words" was a high point of the association's conference in Detroit. The laughter was not unkind, being directed less at the authors of the report than at the members themselves. It came in a burst of recognition that any thesis, be it ever so practical, can be spun into elaborations so tenuous that touch with practical reality is lost to all but the spinners (if you know what we mean.)

The authors of the report knew what they meant, presumably, when they said education must take account of a "functional interaction between an organism, which is dynamic as to growth and needs, and the culture, which is at the same time limiting and facilitating, conservative and changing, in its influence on the organism."

But it is doubtful if these words could convey a precise meaning to any but the authors. And, since the subject under discussion was nothing other than the meaning of Progressive Education itself, it was time to laugh sure enough.

Progressive Education is education that tries to be functional in relation to the needs of society. But it means a lot more than that because (1) the nature of society's needs at any given time is open to argument and (2) education itself plays a part in shaping the nature of society and, hence, its needs. It is, in short, limiting and facilitating, conservative and changing.

Anyhow, Progressive Education is demonstrably practical in its application at any given time and place. And, as long as it is able to sit back occasionally and laugh at itself, we expect it will remain so.

FOR WOMEN ONLY

Probably there were no objections from the men when an audience of women in Detroit applauded loudly a woman authority on etiquette who said terrible things about members of her sex, to wit, that "they are getting uglier every day," that "they diet so much they look haggard," that she wonders "how many of them ever got a man," that the trouble with women's clubs is that everyone wants to be president and after that "honored as founders or what not," and that, in conclusion—as if a conclusion were needed—"they act like a lot of empty-ump mugwumps."

Wise men will not reveal whether they agree with a word of that, whether they would have applauded the authority on etiquette or whether they like America in the European situation. They have troubles enough of their own. They don't even repeat some of the things the authority on etiquette said, although they were printed in the news report. The men, in short, are neutral—expect to do anything about it. is the second type which sees The exceptions prove the rule that people like to spend money. So early in life does the desire assert itself that it is thought by some to be instinctive. There is less odium attached to the name "spender" than to its opposite "miser," which might be cited as evidence of the universality of the buying habit.

This tendency among the masses to spend and buy is recognized by those who have something to sell. Before some may spend there must be others with something to sell and the times when the demand has exceeded the supply have been infrequent and of brief duration.

There are many degrees of buying or spending. Some people spend more than their income. Some buy for the love of "shopping" and others because they need the things they purchase. There are the heavy spenders as well as the thrifty spenders. Every member of civilized society must spend and buy in greater or less degree.

But there are only two types of sellers. There is that type which strives to give the buyer his "money's worth," and there is the spending propensity an opportunity to get the other fellow's money for nothing.

It is unfortunate that the public does not do all its spending with those who give them "honest weight" for their dollars. If it did there would be no need for laws against using the mails to defraud, wildcat stock, bogus promotions and confidence men.

Tractors are commencing to hop around the streets now as farmers are getting them tuned up for spring work. The smaller rubber tired tractors seem to be the favorite of farmers in this district.

You explain it? A representative of a tire house was in town Tuesday with a rubber tractor tire made by Montgomery Ward in the United States, which he was offering for sale away below the price of the Canadian manufactured product. Why is it that we can buy trucks, cars, tires, and nearly everything of this nature from 30 to 40 p.c. cheaper across the line than we can here?

COUNTERFEIT BOOM

There has been a marked increase in counterfeit money in the last two years, a condition of which banks and merchants everywhere have long been aware.

No excuses are necessary for the secret service. The public realizes how difficult it is to track down the maker and passer of "queer" money.

There is enough spurious currency in circulation that it behooves everyone to inform himself on the difference between the good and the bad and to scrutinize every bill received in change. Those who attempt to pass counterfeit money knowing it to be unlawful are as guilty as the man who printed it, so there is danger in taking too much for granted even as to the routine transactions of the day.
